HEALTHY GUT, HAPPIER YOU<sup>1,2</sup>

Many people think their gut is only important for eating and drinking to get energy, nutrients and keep hydrated, but it affects so much more – your whole body and well-being.

Did you know there are important links between gut health and your physical and mental health?

The health of your gut is linked to

- Immunity
- Mental health
- Heart health
- Sleep
- Digestion

Your gut microbiome is affected by stress, lack of physical exercise, diet, and your sleep. Some of the signs of poor gut health are bloating, constipation, diarrhoea, heartburn, fatigue, low mood, anxiety, skin conditions and frequently catching infections, like the common cold.

Here are our top tips for keeping your gut healthy:

- Eat a healthy, balanced diet and stay hydrated
- Incorporate pro-biotics to your diet
- Regularly exercise to help keep food moving through your digestive system
- Manage stress
- Get enough sleep

If you have a gut feeling something is impacting your health, such as bloating, reflux, constipation or diarrhoea, speak to our friendly team in store for expert advice and helpful products.

Get specific with your probiotics

Activated Probiotics is a range of targeted and condition-specific probiotics. Each product is formulated with clinically-trialled probiotic strains known to support a particular health concern, such as constipation, irritable bowel syndrome (IBS) and other concerns beyond the gut.

Biome Lax™ Probiotic contains a clinically-trialled combination of probiotic strains which have been shown to help ease bowel motions and improve bowel regularity.

Biome IBS™ Probiotic was scientifically formulated with specific probiotic strains found to help relieve the symptoms of medically-diagnosed IBS in clinical trials.

SENSITIVE SKIN

Sensitive skin is not a medical condition that can be diagnosed by a doctor. Instead, it is usually a symptom of another condition, such as eczema, dermatitis or dry skin. Many people do not know they have sensitive skin until it becomes itchy or inflamed by a cosmetic product or environmental irritant.

Sensitive skin usually feels dry, itchy or flaky. Sometimes it can crack and bleed. At other times it may peel or feel rough and bumpy. Sensitive skin can happen on most parts of your body, but it is especially common on the hands, feet, lower legs and arms.

There are several treatments for dry or sensitive skin. The best place to start is by cutting out soaps, shampoos, creams and cosmetics that contain parabens, fragrances or surfactants. Check the product label to see if the products you currently use contain any of these. Also, avoid hot showers or baths, as hot water can dry and irritate your skin.

If you have mild eczema, dermatitis or psoriasis, talk to your local pharmacist about their over-the-counter skin care products. Also, remember to drink plenty of water and use a good quality moisturiser designed for sensitive skin. Try to stay cool and avoid sweating, and if you are heading out into the sun, use sunscreen that has been approved for use on sensitive skin. Choosing loose-fitting cotton clothing and dressing in layers is also a good idea.

Remember, your local community pharmacy is here to help.
